Oh Where Are Their Wandering Boys Tonight

(By United Press.)

Washington, March 2.—Washington is wondering what has become of the wandering boys. The boys' usually show up in January preceding a presidential election, loaded with campaign buttons, speeches and imperishable literature favoring some candidate who is not only willing but anxious to save his country from the wolves of the opposition.

Four years ago there was a notable renouveau of "the boys." Taft and Roosevelt overshadowed most other candidates on the republican side, but in the democratic field the race was open to new entries right up to convention time, and the entries came thick and fast to the last minute. Every night or so some new candidate took a flying dive into the heap of self-sacrificing heroes willing to give up their important private affairs to serve the public.

Wilson, Clark, Harmon, Underwood, Gaynor—each in fact, put themselves in the hands of their friends. Few were the hotels that could not boast, or could not admit, they were headquarters for some one of eighteen of the candidates.

Washington was headquarters for ex and prospective office holders, public men and press agents. At any time after 2 o'clock in the afternoon an outsider who braved the storm of argument that enveloped the col-vestibule interior of the historic bar where social and others gather could persuade himself that the presidential chair would have to be a community affair, and the White House turned into an apartment building to accommodate the "can't losers" who were going to be elected.

But this year "the boys" have not shown up.

Those of the democrats who would be willing to succeed Mr. Wilson as the pilot of the ship of state are hanging back in the background waiting for encouragement that doesn't, at the present time, seem likely to arrive. Until Theodore Roosevelt is down in black and white and up in arms, until his hat in the ring and his big stick swinging, or until he is definitely settled the other way, many of the republican martyrs who would be willing to run and save the United States are likewise hanging back.

It looks rather bad for the boys. It takes some time to launch a good publicity bureau. Unless they get an early start, the succession of primaries makes impossible the important early claims to the several states.

Any evening in February, 1912, for instance, a candidate would have had to snort dice with himself to find which of ten candidates could be believed when he proved absolutely and without fear of successful contradiction that he would get the solid delegation to Baltimore or Chicago.

Few persons in Washington know just what is wrong this year. The boys do not affect anyone very much except the hotel proprietors, the restaurateurs and the several hundred newspaper correspondents. Principally the newspaper correspondents.

It was a sad day in the old year when a newspaper correspondent didn't get enough campaign literature to paper a room large enough to house most of the presidential aspirants. And this is a sad year; but so far, they have managed to bear up under the strain.

Rural Credits Discussed Plans Not Perfected

Rural credits was discussed last evening at the meeting of the Men's Liberal club at the Unitarian church by W. H. H. Dufur of Portland, and Percy A. Cupper, of this city, Dana H. Allen, president of the club, presiding.

Mr. Cupper felt there was much uncertainty about securing money from the federal government for the purpose of making loans to farmers at a low rate of interest and expressed the opinion that reliance should be placed more on securing the aid of the state.

He advocated the issuance of state bonds and lending direct to the farmers at the sale of the bonds. This means of securing the money was favored by Mr. Cupper as the state already had the administrative machinery and it would not be necessary to create any new jobs.

W. H. H. Dufur, while approving of the state aid, felt the movement for rural credits should become national and that eventually the money should be secured through national legislation. The amount to be loaned on any land was to be 50 per cent of the assessed value.

The Oregon State Grange endorsed a plan, according to Mr. Dufur, by which the applicant applies for a loan to the state board of agriculture in each county. After the title has been found satisfactory, the application is to be sent to the state land board and the loan granted at 6 per cent on 50 per cent of the assessed value.

Since the people vote municipal, state and school bonds, Mr. Dufur could see no reason why bonds for rural credits should not be voted, although an amendment to the state constitution would be necessary to do this.

THE MARKETS

The following prices for fruits and vegetables are those asked by the wholesaler of the retailer, and not what is paid to the producer. All other prices are those paid the producer. Corrections are made daily.

Prices in wheat today vary from 77 to 80 cents a bushel, one of the millets offering 80 cents. The same is true of oats as the price varies from 55 to 57 cents.

Eggs are holding steady at the low level of 16 and 17 cents in trade. No change is noted in the live-stock market and everything is quiet in vegetables and fruits.

Announcement was made this morning that sugar would be advanced retail 10 cents a hundred tomorrow.
